Bringing Down the House

Brick by Brick

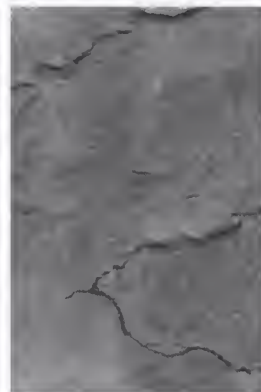

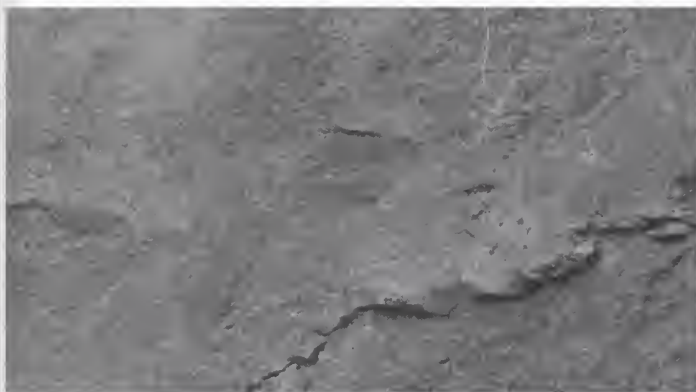

It has been a long time coming and the subject of much debate, but Newton North is finally getting a new building. If everything goes as planned, this year's senior class, will be the last to complete their high school careers and graduate from this peculiar mammoth of a building. We have all spent so much time in it, and so many people have called it their home since its construction thirty-six years ago. As if that weren't enough of a landmark to recognize with this yearbook, we must also take note of the fact that the book you are currently holding is the 100th volume of the Newtonian.

That being said, we would like to use this centennial edition to look back on the past years of our current school building and of our own lives as students. This year's theme stems from that idea. Incorporating the classic red bricks that make up this school and the Riley House garage door that was painted in commemoration of this building's final year, we are literally BRINGIN' DOWN THE HOUSE, BRICK BY BRICK, and examining what has happened in both the history of Newton North and ourselves.

Day by day, you develop a routine. You may sit on the same part of Main Street every day for lunch, or take the same route to the same class. Some students find a place and stick with it, while others shift around. We all find ways to find our way, and construct our lives around the patterns we follow.

Summer Lovin'

Where Do You Go?

(This page, top right) Seniors Lucy Abbot and Kate Gallagher are at the St.Vincent's Childrens Home in South Africa, sitting with three boys, of which two are HIV positive. They spent the first week in July there. (Middle left) Senior Rani Jacobson gathers with the Student Conservation Association discussing environmental education. She spent six weeks preserving Allandale Woods.

For some students it is a long-overdue break from rigor into rest and relaxation. For others it is a time of mental ambiguity and not knowing what to do with one's self. Summertime. The summer always holds a unique and often enlightening experience for each student at North.

As is customary for North summers, 20 students went to the Czech Republic to undergo three weeks of European culture, art and history. Trip attendee Sophia Ventouris, a senior, boasted that the experience "opened her up to voids of knowledge she previously could not conceive of" and junior Evan Clements stated "I would definitely go back, that's all I can say, it was totally indescribable."

As for non-school oriented trips, senior Wynn Tucker took a trip to the Chinese cities of Beijing, Kun Ming, and Lijiang to visit his pen pal to whom he has been writing with for three years. Wynn was amazed at "how much I had truly learned in class and how helpful it was when I was finally immersed in the language and culture...it was a thrilling experience."

To keep away from making such vacations appear too grandiose, the opportunities within the boundaries of Newton must be mentioned. Senior Michael Goldenberg spent his summer working with his father producing math textbooks and campaigning for the current mayor of Newton: Setti Warren. As for other close-by summer jobs, senior Katy Lasell, who spent two months working at the statehouse, said, "I have learned more there in two months than I could ever learn in four months of school."

However, it would be wrong to exclude those who "prudently spent their summers enjoying the lack of four hours of homework per night," says senior Hayley Domin. "It was great to have the time to get through all of the books that were on my 'to read' list...and to get some couch time in with Frasier and some Seinfeld, two of my favorites who had been long forgotten in the grind of my thesis and the rest of the year."

North's students are known for their creativity, and the music scene of the school is no exception. As one junior put it, "the music scene at North is just like the music scene in any city of the world; lots of different genres with one aspect in common: intense originality." One event that highlighted this originality of North's musicians was the new Singer Songwriter Symposium. Aided by well known singer Catie Curtis and musician Kevin Barry, for this Symposium students wrote one original piece, submitted it, and then were either accepted or not. On the day of the Symposium, the student songwriters came together all day to work on their songs with fellow musicians, Catie Curtis, and Kevin Barry. By the end of the day, each song had gained a backup band consisting of other musicians in the Symposium, none of whom were aware of the song before that morning and was performed that night, receiving great praise from all who attended. One performer, North's aspiring rapper Phinale, said, "In the morning, when we first came in, the songs were ok, but by the performance everybody was collaborating with everybody else's songs and each piece turned out to be phenomenal."

Despite a few well known bands in the North music scene departing as a result of college, Nathan Harris, singer and keyboardist of The Downtown Collective, says that "the scene has continued to improve if anything we as seniors are helping younger bands book gigs the same way the older bands did when we were in that same position." When asked about any notable upcoming bands, Nathan answered: "The Sex Machines."

The scene ranges from the rapper Phinale, to rock/funk band The Downtown Collective to the duo ukulele's of The Ukulele Brothers. What really makes the music scene stand out at north is not only creativity and individuality, but it is the support from the fans as well, according to Phinale: "More and more kids are coming out with more and more music and are able to feel comfortable because of the enthusiasm and positive attitude of the actual music listeners." With such a motley group of musicians and genres, the Newton North music scene has incredible potential to grow even further as the popularity of more genres expands more and more.

REMEMBER When

High school is a strange time in a young person's life. There you are, driving around town, having a serious relationship, understanding politics and economics, paying taxes, voting, having a job, you have all the responsibilities of an adult, but you are still under the absolutist rule of mom or dad. For many, it is an uncomfortable mix between childhood of the past and adult life of the future. As students begin thinking about post-high school life, they tend to get sentimental; sentimentality that tends to hold on to some of the most cherishable of childhood memories.

"Two words: 90's Nickelodeon", said senior Dan Barter when asked about his childhood, "Every single day I used to watch shows such as Hey Arnold, Catdog, Beavis and Butthead, and hundreds more". Another senior, Ryan Kwan believes that "kids these days are missing out on the good stuff. Furby? Beanie Babies? Kenan and Kel? Don't even try to compare any of those to Hannah Montana or Dora the Explorer."

One aspect of youth that amazes many students is the simplicity of it. The fact that once race issues had to do with the faster runner, the fact that birthday parties used to consist of the entire class, back when Valentine's Day cards were for everyone; "the times were much easier before four hours of homework a night" says senior Alex Lucken.

Many students admit to wishing again for a time without stressful relationships in their lives, a time when boys had cooties and the respective subjects of hate and boyfriends was completely unheard of. "I remember in elementary school, some of the girls would gang up on all the boys in the grade with water balloons the boys would always go crazy with fear" reminisces senior Rani Jacobson. Another missed aspect of childhood for many is recess. It is amazing to think now with so many academically intense students that there once was a time when students were forced to spend time outside away from schoolwork and even more amazing to think there was once a time when it was safe to do such a thing.

A great number of students have expressed their childhood love of Pokémon. "Looking back, I don't see the fascination, but when I was nine years old it took up my entire life", senior Steve Ravech admitted. All over the school there used to be kids with their heads in their game boy's and only paying attention to "catching them all". Junior Fionnuala O'Donovan states that "personally, I think it was just something we could do to pass the time, and everybody else played, so why not me?" Pokémon was played intensely by many, and whenever a sentimental breakdown is in occurrence, many will dig into their closet to look for that elusive piece of plastic that once held a lifelong work of art.

Despite North students remembering so many exciting aspects of childhood, such as little league, video games, training wheels, and many others, most North students seem to move on quickly from these nostalgic moments and are more than ready for the next step.

You walk into school and feel an unusual early morning energy. You see a cheering crowd in a circular formation. You look into said crowd, and see two young men (seniors Scott Giusti and Rocco Donohue) dressed in revealing female attire laughing hysterically at themselves. It must be Halloween, a special day of the year in which it is actually encouraged to take candy from strangers.

Halloween was on a Saturday this year, but that did not deter much of North's customary costume spirit on Friday the 30th. Vivacity pervaded throughout the many walls of the school, possibly as a result of students being able to finally dress the way they really wanted, or maybe the intense amount of sugar being passed around. Senior Maya Guttman said, "I love Halloween for the sugar. I am excusably sugar high on Halloween; it's a once in a year opportunity." Many students were spotted sucking away on lollipops or chewing down skittles, and as usual Principal Jennifer Price provided a bountiful basket of goodies by Elm Street at the end of the day.

Despite it not actually being Halloween, the costume spirit was a complete success. The usual duo of Andrew Blouin and Cameron Tabatabaie adorned themselves with a suit of faux-grapes each, and seniors Melissa Forester, Courtney Ross, Mary Naugler, and Rian Murphy dressed up as characters from the children's TV show, Teletubbies. As Junior Monica Reuman said, "No matter what the date actually was, today [the 30th] was a beautiful exposition of the creativity of North's students, and, to be honest, Halloween was pretty much complete for me."

On actual All Hallows Eve, many either went to costume parties or trick-or-treating, or any other Halloween activities. Fortunately for most the excitement for the holiday held on in that post-school 24 hour waiting period. However, for Senior Bryson Cochran this did not: "forget about going out, '010 did Halloween on Friday; I spent Saturday night watching every Halloweentown ever made."

Senior twins Ariana and Cameron Tabatabaie demonstrate their great enthusiasm for having a sibling.

Note from Mom

Siblings are the people who know us best, but whom we sometimes wish would leave us alone. Attending the same high school institution as a sibling is an interesting experience. Many Newton North students find that going to school with a sibling helps them relate better to each other as they sometimes take the same classes, have the same friends, and are able to give one another advice.

Senior Ian Buzby says that his brother, sophomore David Buzby, is one of his best friends. He explains, "We hardly ever fight. Sometimes he hangs out with my friends, and sometimes I hang out with his friends. We get along really well." As for advice he gave his younger brother, Ian says simply, "I told him to respect seniors. Oh ten all day!"

Senior Rachelle Jereza, when asked if she gets along with sister, sophomore Rebecca Jereza, at home responded with, "Yes and no." Like most siblings, Rachelle and Rebecca's relationship fluctuates. "When we see each other in the halls we wave, sometimes we hug," says Rachelle. Rachelle advised her younger sister, "not to slack off at North. It's easy to do, but you'll regret it."

Newton North sees many repeated surnames throughout the years. Siblings often manage to get along both in and outside of school.

"I love having a sibling at school, especially because I can take snacks from his food locker, and borrow his iPod during frees." "

MAKING NORTH A MUSEUM

Along with the student-made murals, work of students taking art classes adorn the otherwise drab white-cinderblock and windowless walls of Newton North High School. Student artwork is displayed throughout the school, providing art students with a chance to present their hard work to appreciative students and teachers.

Newton North is filled with talented artists who enjoy sharing their work with others. Senior Samantha Alpert, who is in Art Major 4 (the highest level art class offered at North), says she likes having her artwork displayed around school, because, "it shows people the result of a lot of hard work." Art students are extremely dedicated to their craft: they come after school and take projects home in order to perfect them. Junior Sam Brown, an Art Major 2 student, also says, "Having my art up around school makes me feel accomplished. I'm not used to displaying my artwork, so it's interesting when my friends mention that they saw one of my pieces on Main Street."

Senior Micah Dornfeld, a Photo Major 2 student, agrees, saying, "It's cool to have people ask about my work." Senior Liam Alves, who is in Art Major 4, says he is "proud to show my artwork too my peers," and "inspired by seeing other people's art." One particular piece that Liam takes pride in is a pen and ink drawing, which depicts cows being abducted by aliens during a meteor shower.

Newton North has a strong art department, and students in art classes strive to create the best pieces they can, whether for college portfolios, art competitions, or school displays. Bulletin boards and glass cases on Main Street, outside the art room, and by the Main Officehold various pieces of student artwork that brighten up the school. Students are proud to show off their work, while spectators have the opportunity to enjoy these masterpieces.

Main Street

Newton North has seen many fashion trends over the years, whether they were for better or worse. Perusing through the 1945 edition of the Newtonian, one will find cat eye glasses, skirts that hit below the knee, ankle socks, and button down blouses on girls, while boys wore horn rimmed glasses, button down sweaters, suit jackets, and ties. The 1945 Personality Club's page states, "The Personality Club, open to all girls, attempts to help them acquire poise, self-assurance, and knowledge of good grooming...[and includes] discussions of correct dress and make-up." The 1970s saw long and stick-straight hair styles, high-waisted bellbottoms, and knit tops. The 1980s was the age of big hair, oversized jewelry and glasses, off-the-shoulder tops, and leggings. The 1990s saw a plethora of denim shirts, jackets, and jeans (often paired together), tie-dye, bandannas, and oversized sweaters and hair scrunchies.

Today, Newton North fashion is just as eclectic. On any particular day one can see students wearing pajamas they slept in the night before, dressed up as superheroes or princesses for school spirit, or looking like they're about to walk down the runway. While some trends are fleeting, popular pieces like Ugg boots and Northface jackets have become staples of Newton North fashion.

Goes Runway

For girls, some popular clothing fashion pieces include skinny jeans, leggings, boots, or the ever-trusty and comfortable Newton North shirts and pants. Many girls like to wear Ugg boots for the comfort and warmth in cold winter months, while leather and suede boots are worn with skinny jeans. Senior Alison McKay says, "My favorite trends are knee high boots and rompers. I also like sequins a lot. My favorite thing I own is my Alison name ring, even though it's tacky."

Meanwhile, the clothing style for boys at North is just as varying as it is for girls. Junior Sam Brown describes his style, "I love my hoodie jackets and I have a good deal of sweaters. I always wear jeans because I think I own just one pair of basketball shorts. I wear band shirts, just because I don't want to go shopping for 'real' shirts." Some guys go for a more casual look with the aforementioned basketball shorts, jerseys, flannels, tee shirts, or sweats, while others prefer skinny jeans, polo shirts, and snazzy embellished sneakers.

technology

In the year 1910 our nation lay on the cusp of a mass outbreak of technology. Henry Ford's Model T. Airplanes were in their infancy, the radio was in its most primitive form, and corn flakes were just in their humble beginnings. One hundred years later the world has come to grips with spaceships, televisions, computers and cell phones; all undoubtedly changing North's culture.

By 1928 the classic early morning rush had been revolutionized with the addition of the pop up toaster, instant coffee, modern home refrigerators and electric dry razors into the American life. Furthermore, the installation of stoplights over Newton roads allowed people to travel more easily in the dark.

Throughout the following thirty years the students and technology at North increased exponentially and by the year 1973 the handheld calculator and personal computer had been invented. The electric typewriter gained immense popularity, and people used the television more and more as a tool for educational purposes. "I remember getting assignments to watch a certain program or two for my history classes," said Mary Wright, class of '76 during an interview.

Over the next fifteen years, another technological advancement took place: the pocket calculator was invented, expanding every mathematical opportunity at Newton North. Further changing the interaction North's students had with technology. The personal computer, although not yet commonplace, was invented, and in 1985 the graphing calculator was invented, and within five years Newton North had bundles of graphing calculators at its disposal. "Personally, I think graphing calculators are the most important advance to mathematics that I have ever experienced," says math teacher Johanna Lynch.

From there technology skyrocketed. The World Wide Web came into existence in 1990, giving students the opportunity to obtain any information they needed at any time of day and soon after computers entered the library and the Web and word processing systems took research paper writing from an arduous task to a twenty-minute breeze.

Today, in 2010 the foundations of a new Newton North building and a technological curriculum have been placed. In this new school there will be a library filled with computers, classrooms with the revolutionary Smartboard, and students scurrying about with their iPods listening to the most recent hit by the most recent artist to gain fame with the autotune. Barring any hindrances or mass destructions of the earth, Newton North's vast technological will continue to expand without cease.

I Like The Way You MOVE

It's no secret that parking at Newton North has been quite a problem for a while. Construction of the new school building has resulted in even fewer parking spots available for teachers and students. If one is lucky enough to have a car and decides to drive to school, they must also be prepared to walk to school. Parking spots designated to students can be a strenuous uphill hike away from the school building, which is not always pleasant during those lovely New England winters.

Some students opt to bike to school. Senior Adam Schaffer, who has access to a car, says he prefers biking to school: "Biking is a lot better, because the bike rack is fine and I enjoy the exercise. If I drive to school, there is basically no parking and I have to risk getting a ticket." Many find biking the best form of transportation, as it is quicker than walking and all one needs is to bring a bike lock, instead of searching for a legal parking space. However, less-than-ideal weather can make biking to and from school impractical. Adam admits, "When it's cold, that's fine. But rain or precipitation makes it near impossible." Since Massachusetts weather can be volatile, rain, snow, and ice can force bikers to find another, less risky mode of transportation.

Many students also take the school bus to get to and from Newton North. The bus stops are relatively easy to get to for most students. The bus provides a quick and environmentally friendly way of getting to school and home. Downsides are missing one's bus, or having to wait an hour or more for the buses to arrive after school ends on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Some North students prefer having parents or guardians drive them, or carpooling. Senior Marisa Cohen takes the bus home from school, but says she prefers having her parents drop her off at school in the morning: "I can control what time I get to school, so if I need to arrive extra early to see a teacher or meet people, it's more convenient. Also, I don't have as strict a deadline as at the bus stop." Neighbors and friends also sometimes choose to carpool with one another, often for convenience or to be more green and waste less exhaust.

Of course, if a student is unable to find another mode of transportation, lives close to the school, simply wants to be environmentally friendly, or all of the above, they might choose to walk to school. Freshman Lili Margolin says, "I walk to school because my parents can't drive me, and I don't live too far away." However, her sister senior Olivia Margolin complains, "Since my parents made me an environmentalist I have to walk through the slush in the winter." Although a simple way of getting to school, walking can be uncomfortable during the cold winters, and ice and slush sometimes providing embarrassing moments if one slips and falls in front of the audience of many cars and other students. Furthermore, walking can also pose a time crunch if you don't leave your house early enough to get to class at 7:50 A.M.

Where's Home?

"Home is where the heart is", are the famous words of a famous man. From the homogenous McMansions of Chestnut Hill down to the block party atmosphere of Hunnewell Hill in Newton Corner, the city of Newton, Massachusetts is a grouping of thirteen unique entities that we call home. Newton North's students generally hone from Newtonville, where the high school resides, Newton Corner, Newton Center, Auburndale, Nonantum and West Newton. Newtonville hosts a mass exodus from the high school that pours students out onto Walnut street on a daily basis. For the past three years, students and residents of the village have been battling over parking spaces as the new school rises from the ashes. Many students receive what are known as "tiger violations" as a result of relentless patrol of local meter maids. Rarely are these received by Newtonvillians, as they are called, because so many are in walking distance of the school. "Newtonville is like the hub of the universe," says senior and resident Parker Wells. "The Waban is on the ground," says long-time Newton Corner inhabitant Zoe Stern.

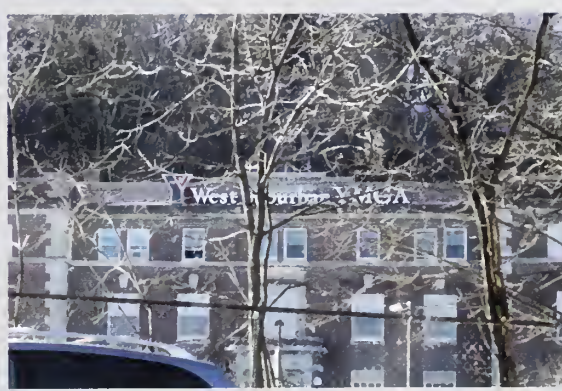

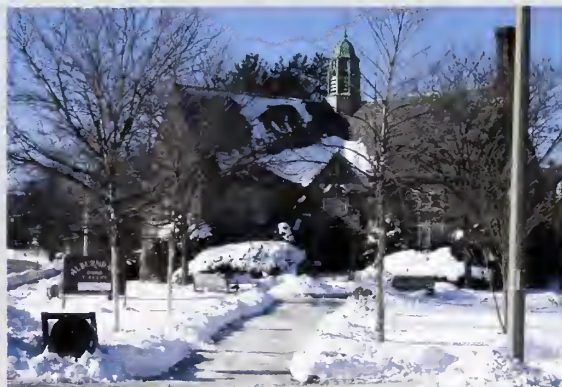

Newton Corner is right on the edge of Brighton, and the Mass Pike, and is often forgotten about. However, the village is host to Underwood Elementary School and Bigelow Middle School, as well as the infamous circle of death, properly named for its difficult and sloppy road directions. To quote Winston Churchill, Newton Center "is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma". The village is host to the gastronomic hub of Newton, has one of three T stops in Newton, and until recently, was host to two Starbucks' in a 75-yard radius, and Newton's only clay tennis court. Along with this, it is home to both North and South students of all sorts. With such an eclectic mix of characters and activities, senior Alex Lucken feels "more connected to the elementary school, Ward, than [he] does to the village itself". The Dale. The most farfetched section of Newton, it is defined by its restaurants the Knotty Pine, Tom's Pizza, and the Ice Cream Club. In addition to these is the antighual Keye's Drug, giving Auburndale the oldest feel of any of the 13 villages. Auburndale has a proud culture of students who feel incredibly united in what many consider an isolated land mass.

West Newton is home to the only movie theater on the north side of Newton. The theatre has retained its vintage feel throughout the years, as well as moderately vintage prices on Sundays only. According to senior Greg Kelley, apparently "growin' up on the west side you only got two choices, the courts...or the corner." Probably a tad fabricated, as Newton is one of the safest cities in the country, but no one can be completely sure. Certainly the most motley of the 13 is Nonantum, also known as The Lake. The Lake is well known for its Italian flag colored lane lines, and its high population of non-Americans. Famous for its summer carnival, and its giant Santa statue each winter, The Lake, according to junior Tiffany Chen "is the most socially connected part of Newton". Yearbook manager Amanda Mazzola is seen every Sunday morning at her favorite Nonantum restaurant, Eddies.

However, more than just these villages feed into Newton North; many students are from areas around Boston, including Hyde Park, Brighton and Jamaica Plain. Boston and Newton students get along swimmingly, the only negative part for Boston students is a long bus ride to get into Newton. Overall, the individuality of North's students and their homes bring very relevant cultural value to the social aspect of the school as a whole.

With the insane amount of homework and numerous after-school clubs at Newton North, it seems near impossible to be capable of balancing such school related work with other outside school activities, or jobs. However, many students possess the work ethic and determination to do so. Students might have interests that they can pursue better or further outside of school, while others take on the responsibility of working for a salary in order to put money toward college or to assert financial independence.

Senior Michelle Bradley works at Antoine's Bakery in Nonantum three days a week. She explains the job has its benefits, such as "the laid back atmosphere. The people I work with are really cool." Michelle enjoys earning her own money, as she also owns a car and needs gas money. She invests the rest to put toward her college education.

Senior Ben Miller spent this past summer and school year campaigning for Ken Parker and then Setti Warren in Newton's mayoral race. He dedicated his time and effort to making phone calls, attending debates, and informing his peers and residents of Newton about both candidates and what they would do to benefit the city. Ben also writes a monthly opinion section for the Newton Tab and expresses his inner-artist through playing the cello. He explains his main strategy for juggling so many activities and his schoolwork is "not sleeping." Although keeping up this routine has its challenges, Ben claims it's what keeps him focused and moving. He says he puts so much effort into each of his dedications because, "I hate being so bored, so I try to do something every minute."

Aida Skelic, a senior at Newton North, spends her extra time campaigning with Green Peace. She has participated in anti-war rallies and events to raise awareness about global warming. At the Boston Under Water Festival, Aida and fellow members of the Green Peace party decked themselves out in life vests, snorkels, and flippers to inform the public about the detrimental effects global warming will have on planet Earth and the city of Boston specifically, which could eventually be immersed under water. Aida says she participates in Green Peace because, "our generation has a lot of power to make a difference, and at this point in history when so many changes are taking place, we really have the opportunity to act."

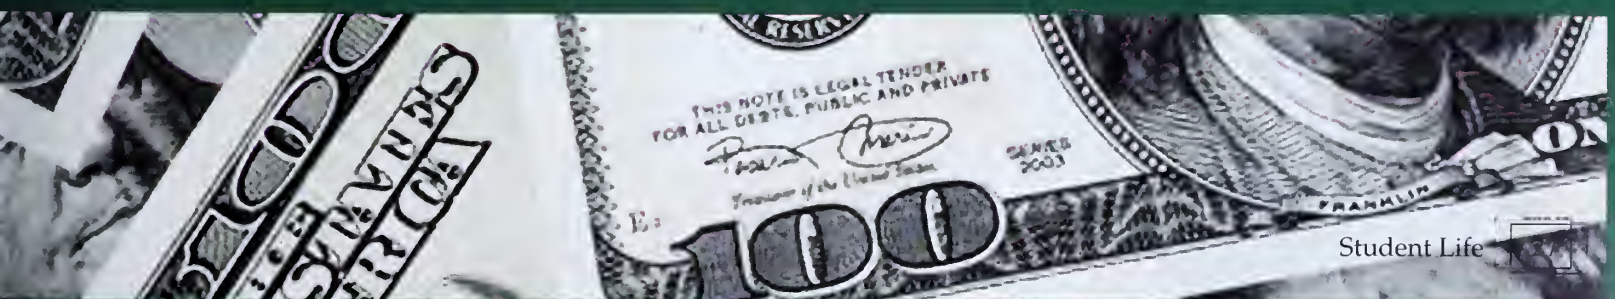

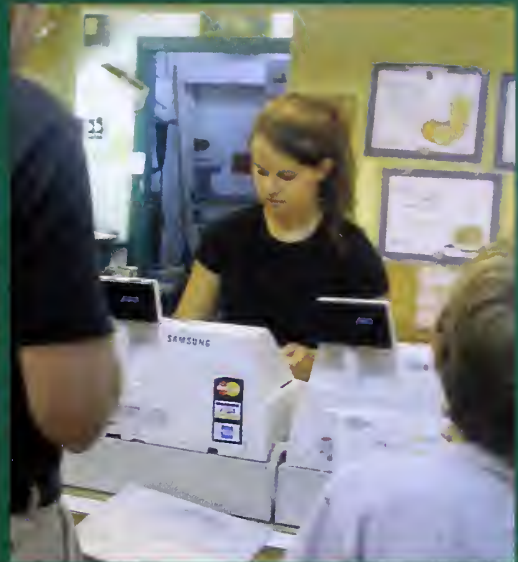

Students at Newton North get involved in numerous activities in which they can find reward and success. Jobs and other activities reflect individual interests and passions, as well as their diligence and motivation. Whether in order to make some extra cash or delve deeper into a personal interest, Newton North students excel in both in-school and out-of-school activities.

“We bleed

Newton North's Main Street has been decked out in orange and black tissue paper and confetti, students work together to paint the school's tiger mascot on the garage doors that are designated to each house, and rally together at sporting events, all in the name of school spirit. Spirit works as a way to build up enthusiasm and bring the different classes together.

Senior Samantha Alpert, who played for both the girl's Varsity volleyball and basketball teams, said, "I try to participate in as many school-uniting spirit events as I can, as well as, dressing up during spirit week." Dressing up in Newton North's school colors gave Samantha and other students a sense of heightened pride and competition for different sporting events. Senior Maia Levoy, who also played for the girl's Varsity volleyball team says she enjoys team spirit because, "it reminds everyone to support our school's teams." Her favorite team spirit themes include pajama day, "because it's comfortable," and the always-classic dress-in-black-and-orange day.

The 2010 senior class began organizing "010 Themed Thursdays," where seniors dress up under a previously decided-upon theme, such as whiteout, beach day, or flip-flops in mid-December. The weekly dress-up day was organized over Facebook. While new traditions are being created, the old continue to thrive: personalized sixth man tee shirts, which are worn to basketball games to express school unity and pride.

Senior Eliana Eskinazi has served as class president throughout her four years at Newton North, and tries to be as involved with the school as possible. "Half of my wardrobe is orange and black," she claims. This year, Eliana helped organize and promote Newton North's spirit week, which included pajama day, tee shirt signing, and wearing the Newton North High School Superfan tee shirt with our school's signature tiger mascot emblazoned on the front. Eliana finds that school spirit involves not only dressing up, but by the unity of the students here. "I smile and say hi to people in the hallways, because I think it's a nice thing to do, even if they think I'm creepy," she says. "I do my best to get involved in all sorts of clubs and activities so that I can meet a wide range of people. Having more connections in the school, and more people knowing one another unites us more."

Spirit keeps up morale, expresses students' pride in school, and celebrates their time spent here at Newton North.

Newton North tigers

Five score and ten years ago on Thanksgiving, the Newton North Tigers and the Brookline Wealthy Towners took the rudimentary fundamentals of might, threw pads on it, hoisted them onto the football field, and on that fateful Thanksgiving day, the seeds of rivalry were planted. Unfortunately, the Tigers were this year defeated by the Brookline team, now known as the Warriors. Newton North students came out in full fledge; decked out in orange and black to cheer on the team regardless of the outcome, but still with a strong concern for the well being of the scoreboard.

The Brookline-North rivalry stretches the course of more than a century, and with the exception of the duration of World War II, the Thanksgiving Day game has taken place each and every November as the most exciting fall sporting event of the year. The host of the game switches off each and every year, and this year the battle was on cold, foreign ground.

As was against the will of the team on the fateful frigid Thursday, the Tigers were triumphed over 18-6. However, by the number of shirtless boys screaming off orange paint, one could have been convinced we were winning the super bowl on our own home turf. The Tigers fought long and hard, but the Raiders came out victorious for their 53rd win of the rivalry. The Tigers still led the series though, at 54-49-7.

Varsity cheerleading captains Courtney Ross and Rian Murphy state Braintree as their main rival. "We beat them this year and it was the best feeling in the world. It was at baystates which is their gym and they usually win"

"Before our Brookline meets, the entire team gets dressed up in blue and red for spirit and we train extra hard" senior captain Carissa Chan says as she discusses the girls diving and swimming rivals.

"Our wrestling match against Newton South is always an exciting match with a lot of fans" says senior wrestling captain, Sam Shames. The North vs. South match has always been played the day before winter break.

37 short years ago, a speech from one Joseph Kennedy pulled apart the doors of the new Newton North High School and the students of the former Newton High School. His 1973 dedication marked the inauguration of a new, asbestos-free building and the end of a single Newton High School.

The beginning was of this North was not all smiles according to one alumni of the class of 1974, David Kingsbury. He claims it was "a lot of hustle and bustle. Kids were either hurrying to find their next class or the new spot to smoke in." Despite the slow start, the old Newton North has since seen many more monumental events and faces.

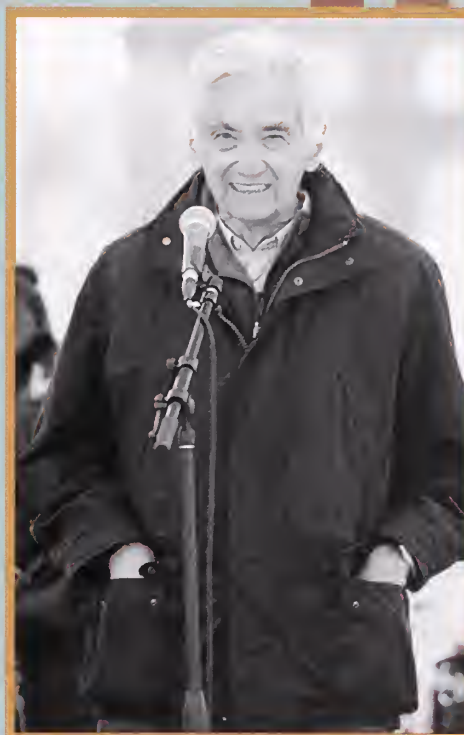

A few famous names have passed through the halls of the old Newton North. In 1985 Matt LeBlanc, known for his portrayal of Joey Tribbiani on Friends, dawned his cap and gown. A few minutes before him, founder of the ALS Therapy Development Foundation, James Heywood, was handed his diploma. Newton North even produced a Jeopardy! champion in Larissa Kelly of the class of 1998. Along with these faces known outside of the North community, the school has produced a handful of graduates who have chosen to return to the school as full-time teachers.

As for events within the school: in 1994 North finished in third place in the annual Science Bowl. In 1997 the improv troupe Spontaneous Generation was founded. And as for sports, the boys' track team has not lost a dual meet in 13 years. Exclusive to the last year of the current building is the first New England Champion in the sport of wrestling, Sam Shames, as well as the national leader in the high school triple-jump, freshman Carla Forbes.

Human Rights Assembly December 11, 1992: "I want you to think about bigotry and racism. But I want it to be the last time you think about it in silence. I am worried about these people who stand by and watch these acts of racism, who stand there and do nothing" -- Leonard Zakim

Newton resident Howard Zinn famous for his controversial speeches. In November 2001, Zinn came under fire after speaking at NNHS about the U.S. military strikes in Afghanistan and the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

WHAT'S THE QUIRKIEST PART OF THIS BUILDING?

"The green lockers tip back and forth."

-Senior Ariella Brown

When the Class of 2010 was still in elementary school, plans for a new building were being discussed. The Newton North building from which the Class of 2010 will graduate is far from perfect, and yet there is a bit of nostalgia present in many students as they are "bringing down the house." They might not all miss the lack of windows, the moldy ceilings, or the confusing room numbering. However, the many quirks of the Newton North High School building that is soon-to-be-demolished are what made the school comically unique.

The first floor is often referred to as "the basement," even though it is built above ground. There are almost no windows on the entire floor; instead all one sees is cinder block. Although windows can often be distracting for a student who would rather daydream than learn calculus, the lack of light is somewhat morose. Furthermore – for a freshman, and even for some upperclassmen – it is almost unnavigable. "My first day freshman year, my classes on the first floor were the only ones I really had any trouble finding," says senior Remy LaFlamme. "My history class was in Room 113 and I got lost both the first and second day of school."

Stairways are also a problem. When it rains or snows, the ceilings leak, and students have to pay attention not to slide down the stairs and injure or mortify themselves. The stairways are difficult to navigate; senior Jeff Handler recounts, "There have been times when I've been on Stair 1 and I go to the second floor and realize that I'm trapped, because Stair 1 doesn't go to the second floor." Senior Eliana Eskinazi remembers a teacher once asking her "how to get to room 439 from fourth floor purple." As the Tiger's Loft cuts off the fourth floor passageway between red and purple, one must take Stair 5. It is necessary to familiarize oneself with the staircases to avoid walking up and down a ridiculous number of stairs.

Some quirks of the building are mildly to grossly unpleasant. Senior Adam Schaffer recalls, "In my TV Production class, there was mold in the ceiling, and it finally collapsed, and the ceiling was leaking for a couple classes after that." Students often avoid looking up at the ceiling to where there is a collection of mysterious species of mold. Senior Rachelle Jereza also recounts, "The yellow lockers once smelt like fish and Axe for about a month. It was disgusting." Whether funny, annoying, or disgusting, the many quirks of the Newton North High School building make for great stories. They may not be missed, but they won't be forgotten either.

Bringing Up the House

The background of the page is a photograph of a school building with a brick facade and large windows. In the foreground, there is a green lawn and a football field. The text is overlaid on the right side of the image.

A specter is haunting the current building on 360 Lowell Avenue: the $200 million skeleton of a new Newton North. After 11 years of discussions and disagreements, the most expensive school in the state is fewer than four months from opening.

The structure of a new school has been a work in progress since September 2007. After a slow start with asbestos scares and cost growths, the building has gone up with surprising speed. The school is to have five "areas" in a zigzag pattern running from south to north: Theatre, Academic Two, Academic One including the Cafeteria, Athletic Area and the Large competition Gym. Designers say that these organized spaces, along with a more a conveniently located main office, will help both students and faculty navigate the new building.

"The current school was built to resemble a city," says senior Ben Miller. Senior Robert Benner agrees, but adds that "it has done so through dusty ceilings, poor ventilation, and regular grime, all of which represent negative stereotype[s] of city living." Although many students consider the current structure to be "jail-like," some, such as junior Derek Butterson, claim that it has an "ineffable charm." The class of 2010 has taken pride in being the last to graduate through the motto "Bringing Down the House." As for the methods of "bringing it down," history teacher John Stark thinks that "we should do it just like the Bastille; brick by brick, all by hand." Unfortunately, that's less than feasible.

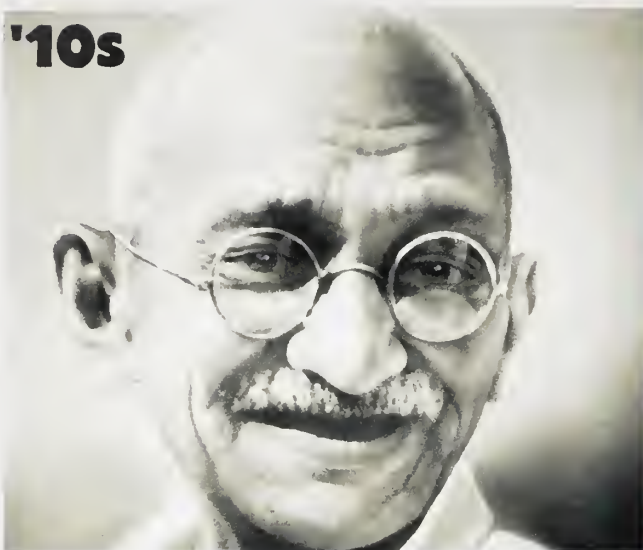

The new building will thrive technologically. Teachers will be able to use new interactive whiteboards; the library will be cut down in size for the sake of educational media centers. With the relocation of the front door, the address will also change from 360 Lowell Avenue to 457 Walnut Street.

Students are giving the new building mixed reviews, depending mostly on grade level. Freshman Anna Nemetz says she is "really excited...the current building is old and...gross," while senior Coby Beeders thinks it's "architecturally uninteresting; they could've done more than a cleaner version of the old [building]." Ben Miller describes it "a classic suburban high school." Regardless of bitterness or incredible excitement, the era of the long-awaited "new school" will soon begin.

(opposite page, top to bottom, left to right) The football field, which sits between the new and old buildings, is waiting for grass to be seeded and the track to be put down. The glass shell for the cafeteria has been constructed. The cafe will be a centerpiece of "Main Street." The view from the second floor looking down on the new "Main Street" will soon be filled with students ready to make the hallway home. The competition gym is fully equipped with start of the art score boards. (background) Artist rendered drawing of the new building from the Elm Road side. 2000's The Red Sox and Patriots have some of their best years yet.

The first ten years of the last century, 1910-1919, hosted the Great War -- the first war to challenge the entire world at once, ending the lives of over 15 million.

The roaring 20's saw the introduction of jazz music, women's suffrage, speakeasies, and an economic boom in the U.S. These were high times, full of wild dancing, cheeseburgers, new technology, and the early surrealist movement. It all came to a close on October 29, 1929, when the stock market crashed, leading into the Great Depression of the 1930's.

Money, food, and even happiness was scarce. In 1932, President Roosevelt signed the New Deal to combat the economic and social devastation. In Germany, the Nazi movement began under Adolf Hitler. As a result of his iniquities, in 1939, the Second World War erupted. It reached its climax with the first nuclear bomb to be dropped on human beings, in Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945.

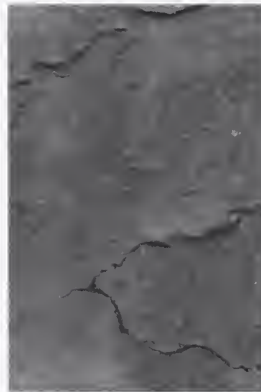

The end of the war set up the relaxed state of the baby boom in the 1950's; afterwards, however, came the slap of Revolution in the 60's. This was a decade filled with novelty: The Beatles, acid, the Kennedy obsession, the Vietnam War, a close-up of the moon. The civil rights movement continued to advance.

A similar vein ran through the 70's after an increase in anti-war feelings and the growth of drug culture. The 1980's began with a rise in computer technology, seeing the release of the world's first Mac in 1984. These early years also brought forth Michael Jackson and the fall of the Challenger shuttle in 1986. Capping off the decade, in 1989, was the fall of the Berlin Wall and the end of the Cold War.

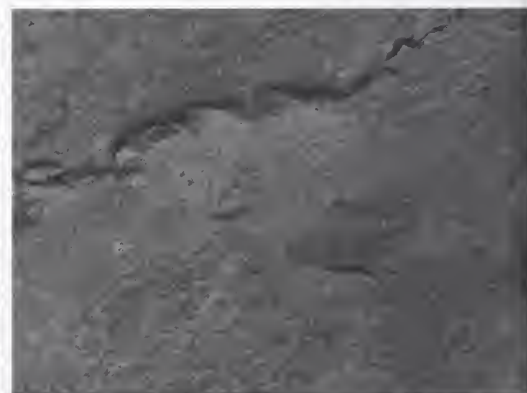

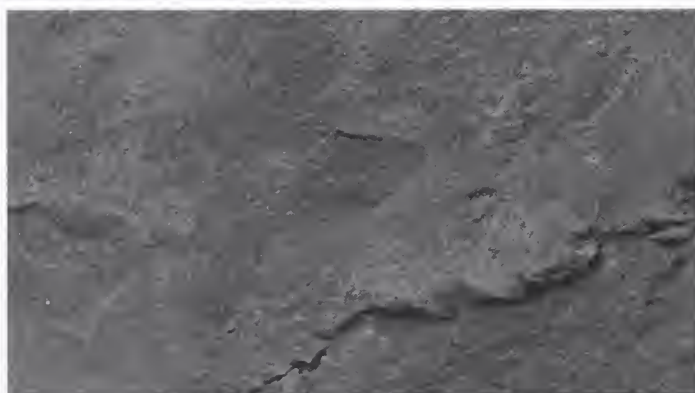

During the 90's, the U.S. experienced its largest period of economic growth. The release of the compact disc in 1992, the expansion of the Internet, and the cell phone taking off in sales all highlighted a decade of incredible technological advancement.

This last decade, the 00's, had its very highs and very lows. September 11, 2001, the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, the recession and the Boxing Day Tsunami of Indonesia in 2004 are a few of the lows. Highs, however, include the iPod, a visit to Mars, and the first black president of the U.S. These past ten decades have surely been some of the most exciting in history.

Frame by frame, we get a collection of all the people who, together, make up our school. They make us smile, and they remind us of what we love and what we've accomplished over the years. School is a social environment; the faces we see every day form the social networks that we will never forget.

"The class of 2010 is legendary. Ever since freshman year Mr. Aronson said we were the best, and we are. We began as puny freshmen who danced awkwardly and provocatively at the freshman boat cruise, but we were the best. The next year, we grew, made more friends and had the ultimate sleepover on the disgusting yet cherished Main Street. We showed Newton our party mentality junior year when we rocked the Paradise Rock Club at semi-Formal. This year, we will hold our title as "the best class" during senior prom. The class of 2010 does not just party though, we coordinate, educate, inspire, and succeed. We will graduate and separate this year, but we will always be part of NNHS 2010. When our classmates go on to cure cancer, fly to space, lead politics, become CEO's, win American idol, claim the world record, or make someone smile, we will be able to say "Hey! He or she was in my class!" We were both in Riley house!" And if you insist you can say "010 ALL DAY" Even if our building does not exist we will always have a connection to Newton North. Remember: you are part of the best, together we are Newton North Class of 2010, and we are BRINGING DOWN THE HOUSE. "

It has been a privilege and a pleasure being your Housemaster these past four years. I have enjoyed getting to know you individually and as a group. Your class will forever be known for its positive energy and outstanding school spirit. Your commitment to excellence in all areas of our school has been remarkable.

The future holds great promise for each of you and I know you will all make the most of what life has to offer.

Please know that you have made NNHS a better place with your presence.

Thank You and Good Luck,
Mr. Aronson

Dear Class of 2010

2010 RILEY

Dear Class of 2010:

Congratulations you have made it! On the one hand it feels like yesterday that I addressed you on Step-Up-Day as the newly appointed principal of this building. On the other hand, it feels like we have been together for a long time. You will always be a special class to me as we entered North together.

I have so enjoyed watching you mature over these last four years. I have been particularly impressed with the leadership you exerted this year throughout the entire building. '010 has a ton to be proud of.

As you leave us, please never forget the valuable lessons you learned here at North. I hope that the life lesson that "Learning Sustains the Human Spirit" will be with you always, as you work to make our world a slightly better place.

Thank you for "Bringing Down the House" with such poise, spirit and leadership. We will all miss you. Please come back and visit, even though you might have a tough time finding us.

Best,
Jennifer Price
Principal

Beals 2011

Dear Class of 2011,

Hooray! We made it to senior year! You can be proud of your growth over the last few years. Certainly, I am very proud of you. You have accomplished a great deal of work within these walls and you have known many friends here. Each of you has your own personal history here, like thousands of North alumni. While it may be a bit tough to leave, it's great to remember all of the good memories and to recognize that you also have an important new beginning, a chance that most high school students never get. What an amazing opportunity - to be the first senior class in our beautiful new building and to be the first graduating class from our new school. Arguably, you may become the most positively influential class. If you play it right, your leadership as upperclassmen will help to set the tone for school spirit for years to come.

I look forward to our senior year together! Let's embrace the wonderful opportunity ahead of us! Here's to memories old and new and the success you'll find in our new school.

Best,
Ms. Stauss

Adams 2012

To the Class of 2012,

You continue to leave your mark on the institution known as Newton North High School. In the classroom, on the stage, on the athletic fields or in a corner of Main Street, NNHS is a better place because you are here. Next year while the building changes, the institution does not. Continue to do great things.

Best,
James D'Orazio

Barry 2013

Congratulations Class of 2013!

You have successfully completed your first year of high school. This is your school now, take advantage of all the opportunities that Newton North has to offer both inside and outside of the classroom.

I have thoroughly enjoyed getting to know you individually and collectively. I look forward to working with you next year.

Continue to treat yourself and your peers with respect and kindness.

I hope that you will use the positive momentum we have gained from this year to carry us into sophomore year.

Best,
Aaron Sanders

"This past year was the last in the old building. It marked the last spirit week on Main street and the last fundraisers in purple. It also marked an overwhelmingly successful semiformal. Class of 2011 made this last year a memorable one and we look forward to starting many new traditions as seniors in the new building next year."

To my wonderful Class of 2013. We have accomplished wonderful things so far in our high school career. Our freshman Football team beat Brookline, which was the best feeling ever! As for "FroshCab" [which was amazing], you all did a phenomenal job with your performances. We will look forward to many more wins, many more performances and lots of Tiger Pride! We still have several things to achieve within the next three years here at North and I have faith and confidence that we will conquer! May your reach always exceed your grasp!

- President Carl Be Whitham, not Wit-out him!

Class by class, you build up your high school transcript. With every small assignment, you shape your future and prepare for the years ahead. Not every moment has been perfect, but when we take the experience as a whole, we all know that what we have learned forms who we will later become.

CLASS

Repeat and Modify

Transitioning from old to new ...

Shakespeare is a first semester English course exclusive to seniors who during the first semester read eight of the Bard's classics and put on a one-hour performance of one these plays. Teacher Tim Finnegan says that the course is "designed for students who want to understand the allusions behind William Shakespeare's plays".

The Short Story is also an English course offered exclusively to seniors. Teacher Peter Goddard believes that a "short story allows for a deeper discussion about the scope of a piece of literature". The course moves quickly from story to story with a discussion on the previous night's reading in class.

Hip-Hop is a second semester English course open to all students except freshmen. Students focused around the culture of hip-hop rather than the actual music itself. Teachers Peter Goddard and Adam Carpenter believe that hip-hop, as a significant youth movement in music, should be better understood.

Earth, Labs, and Literature is an English and science course offered to seniors that "weaves together literature about the environment and environmental science" says the teacher Ann Dannenberg. The class, taught by Ann Dannenberg and Liz Craig-Olins takes weekly trips to nearby Cabot Woods or Bulloughs Pond.

Analyzing the Past ... Discussing the Future

Progressing through time ...

From the Neolithic Age to the age of the American economic crisis, the History Department at North covers all ages and times. As young wide-eyed freshman, students study the ways of the modern world and its history, then move onto the complicated 20th century and how preceding events impacted that wild hundred years as sophomores. As juniors, students have the chance to study deep into the roots of our own society in their first possible AP history course, American History. Also, during this mentally pernicious onslaught of work students write the infamous junior thesis; a paper that burns up the mind in three to four months in which students must write a 13-20 page thesis essay on a topic of their choice from American history. Senior year students move on to possible studies of Europe, East Asia, Africa, or various social sciences such as Psychology, Ethics, or Economics.

(Left to right, top to bottom) Eliza Ashley studies Modern World history. Lucas Gitzen listens intently to a lecture by his teacher. Mr. Barry lectures his class on the past and its significance. Sasha Lund takes notes on the AP U.S. History textbook while laughing with her friends. On the bottom, both Mr. Vignone and Ms. Wilkins teach their respective classes.

ADD OR SUBTRACT

How can one define mathematics? Simply put, it is the study of the skills you will need for your future checkbook; adding, subtracting, multiplying, dividing, and for the more creative students, throwing in some calculus from time to time. For four years North students take their middle school mathematical abilities through a journey in preparation for the financial world in one of five sections. Although much of the work done with one's checkbook requires paper and pencil, many students now find that it behooves them to pick up a calculator instead. North's curriculum comports itself well in this time of radical mathematical change by offering various courses.

Throughout history people have searched for the meaning behind life and the natural forces around us. At North, students explore these questions and other theories through experimentation. They learn about the structure of the human body and its progression from a single cell to a complex being. They combine different solutions to better understand solubility and combustion. By their senior year, students can choose an aspect of science to focus on. Along the way, students learn about the different theories and disciplines as teachers enforce upon them to find what interests them and pursue it. The school offers classes ranging from meteorology to oceanography, but whatever the topic, science teachers push students to question the world around them and arrive at their own hypotheses.

Explore Culture

Newton North has always encouraged its students to take one or more foreign language courses. Here, a student has the opportunity to study French, Spanish, Italian, Chinese, American Sign Language, or Latin. Some students opt to sign up for two and even three language courses per year. Learning a language is a useful skill whether one decides to go backpacking through Europe, or simply bumps into a few foreign tourists in need of directions on the streets of Boston.

The French, Spanish, Italian, and Chinese courses also offer exchange trips. Students stay with a family from the respective country and attend school with a student they're age, who also comes to stay in Newton for a period of time. In the classroom students learn through books, research, and movies about different cultures, whereas visiting a foreign country, students live the culture and experience it for themselves. This allows them to come to a better understanding of the people and lifestyles, and improve their language skills.

Over the course of four years at Newton North, students progress from learning basic grammar and sentence structure to reading classic texts, such as L'Étranger by Albert Camus in French classes or interpreting abstract Spanish poetry. By the end of a student's time at North, if having taken four years of a language, one would (ideally) be proficient.

(Top to bottom, left to right) Mr. Mazzola watches one of his students present an article in Italian to the class. Mr. Zhu asks Caroline Ellison and Will Zhang about their ethics on violence in Chinese media. Michaela Berla-Shulock, Matt Bressler, and Meagan King listen as their Spanish teacher Mrs. Monahan gives a lecture. Skylar Fox and David Gore listen to Mr. Mazzola as he asks the class questions in Italian.

Physical Education

By the time high school hits, "most students would rather be learning real stuff than running around in circles," says one anonymous sophomore. The Physical Education program at Newton North however achieves an environment in which students do learn practical, healthy methods of living along with the occasional lap or two. Starting in 9th grade, students take a sexuality and health course that supports them as they develop and confront the uncomfortable issues of high school romance. As students move on, they are given a free range of water and land sports as well as methods in coaching or athletic training. After four years in the program, a Newton North graduate can speak proudly of his or her refined knowledge of how to keep his or herself healthy, active, and physically fit.

Build Your Career

Some students at North choose to pursue a career education program during the school day. North is one of the only public high schools in the country to have a Vocational high school in the Public school. The Technology Education and Career Department gets students ready for a hands-on occupation they may choose, as well as immersing them in education they may not receive at other schools, such as carpentry, cosmetology, auto-mechanics, and culinary classes.

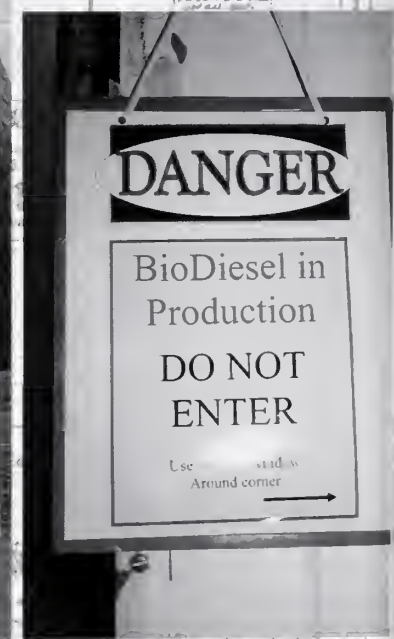

This year a new class, Greengineering, which consists of working with biodiesel and other green technologies, has been added to the course opportunities students may take during their time at North. This new group of green scientists may acquire algae technology from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology that could change how we view energy. Steve Chinosi, the director of program, says "The algae lab will engage students through an integrated curriculum of biology, chemistry, engineering, environmental science, and business of alternative energy."

In these classes students can explore the realm of technical education as well as learning about the more academic aspect of education. This allows students to leave North with a more cohesive education that will help their career opportunities later in life.

The fine arts department encompasses photography, studio art, and music. Through art minor 1 to major 4 art students explore each part of the subject from foundation principles to advanced techniques. Some students choose to study just ceramics, while others choose to mediums such as painting and drawing into their art education. In the music department, students either perform pieces of classical and contemporary music together in a symphony, orchestra, or band, or take classes that explore theory and design, such as musicianship to learn the science of music.

The teachers all try to push students to use their imagination to create unique pieces of art. Senior Olivia Glennon, an art and photography student, said "All three of the teachers, Ms. Slattery, Ms. Truant, and Mr. Morris, have really unique assignments and give the students enough advice to help you succeed, but also give you enough space to allow you to make each piece your own."

By the end of their senior year, students not only know a great deal about art, but have also experienced many different parts of it. Whether focusing on studio art, photography, or music, students enjoy their time in the fine arts department.

Create a Masterpiece

Discovering a New Language

It is a truth universally acknowledged that English is the first language of most Newton North students. However, there are many for whom the language is a convoluted mess of unconventional spellings and awkward pronunciation rules. To combat this frustration, Newton North has a program for English Language Learners to increase the proficiency of these students who do not speak English as their first language. Courses in this program offer students from across the globe the opportunity to develop skills in English strong enough to brave even the infamous pool of colloquialisms and jargon that is Main Street.

The ELL program offers science, history, math and English classes, which aim towards both mastery of the subject matter and literacy. Spending one's high school career surrounded by a language that one is unfamiliar with can be tough, the ELL program helps students who have entered not knowing a word of English, come out as fluent and articulate as any native speaker could ever hope.

Overcoming Obstacles

All students at Newton North have some obstacle they must overcome, to their advantage North has always acted as a place where overcoming those obstacles is an easier task. The EDCO, or Educational Collaborative, Program for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing strives to help students who might otherwise have difficulties with lectures and class discussions. It consists of teachers, who teach classes in American Sign Language, and interpreters, who translate English into ASL for students.

The Newton and Waltham EDCO Program is the oldest secondary level program for the deaf in Massachusetts. It allows students to either come together in a small classroom setting or interact with other students in large classroom environments. This program helps deaf students move on to colleges and the rest of their lives with a better education than they might get at a different institution and builds lifetime bonds between interpreters and students.

In Memoriam

We dedicate this yearbook to those faculty members who we lost too soon.
Each influenced our school and community in their unique ways.

Ucal McKenzie

He was an incredibly talented counselor who connected with each and every one of his students. Counseling was not a profession for him, but a calling. As the coach of boys' varsity soccer, he showed a tenacious spirit that was shared with each member of the team. His vibrant and passionate spirit echoed throughout the halls of Newton North. He missed a moment to give of his time. He gave his time to us as if he held eternity in his hand. He never said "no".

-- Inez Dover

Donna Mandatori

Donna was fiercely passionate about Career and Vocational Technical Education. She believed in the teachers, the students, and the opportunities these programs provided. Always the first to find the good qualities in everyone she met, Donna had an uncanny ability to see the unique gifts and qualities in each person. She lived her life with a passion, and to be in her presence, one experienced an energetic aura that surrounded her always - it was so palpable that one could not help but be infected by her persona - it was just that contagious!

-- Diana Robbins

Thomas DePeter

"Most students say [Thomas DePeter]'s the first teacher who makes them see things in a different way," according to Peter Capodilupo, who also described him as having a brilliant intellect and a creative approach. Along teaching, Mr. DePeter directed more than 70 plays and one-acts and coached varsity boy's lacrosse for 10 years, leading three teams to E. Mass. championships and one to a state title.

-- Newtonite

Robert Mitchell

In the school's official statement, Michael Zilles described Mr. Mitchell as "fiercely intellectual, uncannily erudite, a teacher who held himself and his students to the highest of standards, and kept in contact with many of these students as they went off to study classics at elite colleges and universities. Bob gave his whole to any student or colleague who asked for his help. He asked for the best, gave his best, and anyone -- anyone -- who wanted to join him felt his welcome. In his classroom, he let students know where they were and what they were doing; but they never knew where they might end up. It was an adventure. Perhaps most telling about Bob was not only how much he knew and how well he communicated what he knew, but also his undaunted good will."

-- Newtonite

Club by club, Newton North has created a community of students with diverse interests through extracurricular activities. These activities develop a valuable résumé. But more importantly, they help us figure out what we truly enjoy, and enable us to share our passions with like-minded people.

Newtonian

The Newtonian strives to capture the events and memories of the school year in a publication that students, faculty and alumni will look back at for years to come.

Advisor: Amanda Mazzola

Senior Editor: Anna Crosbie

Section Editors: Tania Bajwa, Avia Bui, Micah Dornfeld, Emily Lemieux, Olivia Margolin, Zita Polgar, Aida Skelic

Newtonite

The Newtonite is a student paper that provides the school community with information about things going on at school. Students on the paper have a variety of jobs, from writing to selling ads to managing the newspaper's income. The paper, established in 1922, is currently in its 89th volume.

Advisor: Kate Shaughnessy

Editor-in-Chief: Ellen Sarkisan

Thoughtprints

Thoughtprints is Newton North's student-run art, literature, and music publication. Students submit their art, writing, and music. A vote decides whether the piece is accepted, and at the end of the year, a magazine and CD are compiled, as a display of the talent and creativity of Newton North students.

Advisor: Neil Giordano

Editor-in-Chief: Antonia DiMambro

Tiger Magazine

Tiger Magazine is an entirely student-produced television news magazine show, which airs on Newton's cable access station. The goal is to produce one issue a month with a variety of short segments.

Advisors: Neil Giordano and Amanda Mazzola

(Top) Senior Chris Welch edits his basketball instructive technique segment for Issue number two of Tiger Magazine. (Middle) Seniors Rani Jacobson and Remy LaFlamme review an old yearbook for ideas for their own yearbook spreads. # community service

Environmental Club

Our club aims to raise awareness of important environmental issues and help the school, the city, and beyond become more environmentally friendly. Whether implementing a new single-stream recycling system or planning annual events like the Charles River Cleanup, Earth Day celebration, and EnviroJam, we are always working to make our community greener."

Officers: Carissa Chan, Emily Denn and Naomi Genuth

Advisor: Ann Dannenberg

Orange Shield

Orange Shield is a club where we are trying to get more students to be more involved in community services and volunteer work. This year we have accomplished a lot from toy drives to raising money for those affected in Haiti. We continue to help many non-profit organizations and plan on taking part in a few walks this upcoming spring.

Officer: Maria Brandi and Tiffany Leung

Advisor: Michael Hazeltine

Gay/Straight Alliance

The Newton North High School Gay-Straight Alliance meets once per week to discuss LGBT issues, organize three to four major awareness-raising events per year, and have lots of fun in the process. We work both inside and outside the walls of our school towards a day when discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity no longer exists.

Officers: Adam Halwitz, Ben Miller, Yaelle Sarid-Segal, Miko Walsh, and Madeleine Aquilina

Advisor: Darby Verre and Janice Lichtman

PAWs (Positive Agreement Works)

PAWs is NNHS's student run mediation organization. PAWs is a resource within the NNHS community that focuses on peer conflict resolution. # & activism

Microcredit

In the Microcredit Club, we raise money for loans for small businesses in the developing world that don't have access to financial institutions. When their loans are repaid, we loan to others, thus creating a cycle of low-interest loans that help many struggling people in the developing world alleviate themselves from poverty.

Officers: Leah Cepko and Brett Sagan
Advisor: Ty Vignone

Minga

Minga is a teen-run not-for-profit that works to empower youth to take action to end the global child sex trade. We hope to motivate 2 million youth-the number of children exploited annually in the trade- to take actions that raise awareness and help prevent teens in our generation from becoming future victims or abusers. The club has raised $3000 and involved the NNHS community in its events.

Officers: Rebecca Kantar and Jackie Assar
Advisor: Janice Lichtman

Nicaragua Aid Club

Nicaragua Aid Club raises money and collects donations to help the students and schools in San Juan del Sur, Nicaragua. Bake sales and donations drives are organized to gather money, school supplies, clothes, shoes, and toys for children in Nicaragua. Members then travel to Nicaragua once a year for a few weeks to deliver the donations and use the money raised to repaint school buildings and keep children in school by funding their education fees.

Advisor: Fiona Blyth

Tutors in Action

Tutors In Action is a program in which Newton North students from all grades are matched up with elementary or middle school students to tutor. In addition to helping their tutees with schoolwork, tutors get to know their tutees and answer any questions they may have about middle school, high school, or life! Both tutors and tutees learn a lot and have a lot of fun!

Officers: Jen Diamond and Jess Kramer

just for fun

This is for clubs that don't technically fit into categories of publications, culture, or student government, but play just an important role in the Newton North community. This section is dedicated for those out there who gathered together and created a club to express their passion and interest in whatever it may be- from Pokémon to freestyle dancing and everything in between- clubs like this bring character to Newton North and make it unique.

(this page middle) Senior Mac Remy's breakdance move is broken down into three steps: 1) he gets in position, 2) he gets a sturdy hold of the ground and 3) he pushes off and lifts his feet to execute this difficult breakdance move.

SHOW

A Streetcar Named Desire

Synopsis: The play reveals to the very depths the character of Blanche DuBois, a woman whose life has been undermined by her romantic illusion which lead her to reject so far as possible the realities of life with which she is faced and which she consistently ignores. The pressure brought to bear upon her by her sister, with whom she goes to live in New Orleans, intensified by the earthy and extremely "normal" young husband of the latter leads to a revelation of her tragic self delusion and in the end, to madness.

Director's Note: Directing A Streetcar Named Desire is long overdue. For years I heard Stanley's wailing and remorseful Stella. I could see his face and hear his voice in my dreams. Blanche would be my project. Stella would be my mission and Stanley was an artistic adventure. I love directing Tennessee Williams plays. There is always something unreachable and destined in his works. "Streetcar" deals with so many societal issues - the ones we still in 2009 don't like to talk about, the ones we avoid because they are just too overwhelming, too painful and too ugly; issues such as domestic abuse, alcoholism, class, gender and sexual orientation. These issues play a major and powerful role in our lives. Family issues, spousal interactions and the difficult issue of rape and the devastating effect it has on one's mental health is part of this complicated and complex play. "Streetcar" deals with the fragility of life and how love, hate, power, greed and guilt affect the lives of those involved.

Theater is a venue where life's issues are reflected in a mirror. In theater, dishonesty can become honesty, liars can be truth seekers, and faith and courage are not just words. In theater, families can be torn apart and come back together or stay apart. In theater these powerful issues and situations can be thoughtfully, artistically and passionately observed. I hope you see what I've witnessed during rehearsals; the beauty and sincerity of each actor and the commitment to their craft.

To the cast A Streetcar Named Desire was a difficult and challenging piece of theater - but you got it - thank you for taking the journey. I know the ride was tough but you endured and excelled.

Twentieth Century

Directors' Note:

We read Twentieth Century over a year ago when we started looking at scripts. Countless plays later, Twentieth Century, with its larger than life characters and high energy stuck with us. We've loved watching it develop into the wild ride it is today.

Twentieth Century was adapted by Ken Ludwig in 2004 from the original play by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, written in 1931. The play had not been produced since the 1950s, and Ludwig hoped to bring it back Broadway. Ludwig revised the play so that the cast has been reduced by more than half and moments have been changed to bring the spirit of the comedy into the modern theatre scene. About fifty percent of the dialogue was rewritten. Though elements of the show have been changed, we certainly think that Ludwig has achieved his goal: "retaining the essence and exuberance of the original--the sly wit, the smart mouthed commentary, the outsized egos and the relentless plot."

-Julia Mandel-Folly & Ingrid Rudié

Synopsis:

This hilarious, fast paced comedy will have audiences laughing from Chicago to Grand Central Station! Twentieth Century follows financially ruined theatre producer Oscar Jaffe's zany plots to win back his former lover and leading lady, Lily Garland. Outrageous characters and wild twists drive this over the top farce, complete with a religious zealot writing faulty checks and a plan for a Passion Play starring a menagerie of wild animals. Board the Twentieth Century Limited and enjoy this uproarious adventure!

CALIGULA

Directors' Note: Caligula is the vacuum left behind when everything pure and beautiful is dug out of a love story. In it Camus has woven a coldly terrifying yet absurd exploration of that void: he asks how we can understand that which appears to be none. It's deep. It's dark. It's just a bit hilarious. If ever you feel that you're not quite sure what's going on, well, that's just what it is.

- Chris Annas-Lee and Seth Simons

Synopsis: In a stunningly lyrical translation of the original French text, the Roman emperor Caligula returns from a three day absence precipitated by the death of his sister and lover to declare his new philosophy: that absolute freedom can be obtained only through the pursuit of logic at all costs.

Over the course of three years, he seeks this goal by systematically perverting human values and randomly destroying human life. He is supported perhaps out of love, perhaps out of fear by his wife Caesonia and retainer Helicon; he is opposed by a group of power-hungry noblemen conspiring to kill him. Caught in the middle is his young pupil, Scipio, tormented by the gradual realization that he has much in common with the teacher he knows he should hate. As the play progresses and the emperor approaches his deadly end, these forces steadily coalesce into a terrifying climax asking all along whether Caligula has an even darker, unannounced intent.

Directors' Note: August of our era. Arthur Miller begins All My Sons with this vague bit of stage direction. Set immediately after the cataclysm of the Second World War, his play examines the result when the generation that started the war meets the generation that fought it. It is a clash of vision; a battle between pragmatism and idealism. When we were choosing a play we sought universality -- we wanted a show that would reach across generations. All My Sons is not a play that is frequently performed at the high school level; it takes on sensitive subjects with an honesty that still resonates and uplifts. It compels audience to reflect on their own lives, and their own humanity. History shows us that our destinies are linked in unexpected ways, and All My Sons reminds us that we owe each other our best intentions. We can be better.

Synopsis: All My Sons tells the story of the Kellers, a family torn apart by war. Joe, the father, ran a factory during the war which manufactured faulty airplane parts; he was cleared of guilt, but his partner was jailed for the crime. The specter of Joe's past and the fact that the family's eldest son was reported missing in combat prove a potent mix. A mother in denial and a disillusioned son add to the action, and as the tension rises, these threads form a complex weave of electrifying intensity. As the tranquility of the Kellers' life disintegrates, All My Sons questions traditional notions of responsibility and obligation and powerfully examines the morality of post-war America.

CABARET

Director's Note: It is always an honor to work with this mostly student run and driven organization. Truly it has been the student's love, passion, discipline, and determination that has made working on Cabaret a special experience for me and I hope for everyone involved as well.

Thank you all for your patience and participation throughout this long rehearsal process. A process that may have sent home students completely exhausted with sore muscles, but hopefully feeling satisfied and nourished by working on their craft.

So, leave your troubles outside and enjoy Cabaret!
- Kristen McKinney

NITROUS OXIDE

Nitrous Oxide is a troupe of ten writer/actors who have worked collaboratively, through regular workshops, to write a sketch revue. N2O's material covers topics ranging from the zombie apocalypse to the supercontinent Pangaea; from kittens, nature's most frightening animal, to modern literature; and from piracy on the high seas to woolly mammoths on the Arctic tundra. The show itself will be a high-paced performance guaranteed to take audiences through the spectrum of human emotion.

PLAYWRIGHT'S FESTIVAL

The Playwrights Festival is Theatre Ink's microcosm of theater. This year, six students have written and edited their ten minute plays with professional playwrights, professional actors, and each other. The student written, student acted, student directed, and student produced shows start from scratch and end up in a fully flowered production. Newton North's Playwrights' Festival is a chance for Theatre Ink to show off its independence, creativity and zest.

Play by play, regardless of whether it is describing a sport, it is how many get through life. For high school students, sports are often the biggest social events. For the past few years, athletes have been displaced from North, yet all have made the best of it, and isn't that the way to move forward?

cheerleading

This past season has been successful in many ways. We accomplished one of our major team goals, which was to win Bay States. We came together in the hard times and really proved to each other that we are more than just teammates, we are family. Everyone on this team is really dedicated to our sport and proved that day in and day out at practice, on the competition mat on the sidelines. GOOD JOB TIGER CHEER WE LOVE YOU ALL AND ARE SO PROUD OF YOU ALL!

boys' football

With the rough start we had at the beginning of the season, most kids would have quit. But this group of kids was not like most teams. We were in quite a hole early in the season, but by counting on each other, we have managed to turn our season around and keep our three main goals alive: beat Brookline, have a winning season, and win the next game. We always say that football doesn't build character, it reveals character. And judging from the way we have fought back, this team had a lot of character.

Looking at our record, it might be hard to believe us when we say we wouldn't change this season for the world. While it may have been nice to get a few more "W's", we knew it was going to be a challenging year from the start: a new coach (with a Welsh accent), nine new players and injuries galore. But our individual and team development throughout the season was evident, especially in our game against Newton South, in which we crushed the Lions 3-1. Thank you to Hamblin for introducing us to a new tradition of mini golfing, and to Tetsi for living out of her car so she could make it to our practices and games, you both inspired us with your passion for the sport and allowed this season to be as fun, memorable and successful as it was. We would like to thank our girls, especially, for playing with passion, putting so much effort and love into the into our senior sheets, and making our last season our best one! We love you and know you'll do big things next year!

- Camilla Jackson, Kim Gillies, and Lee Ford

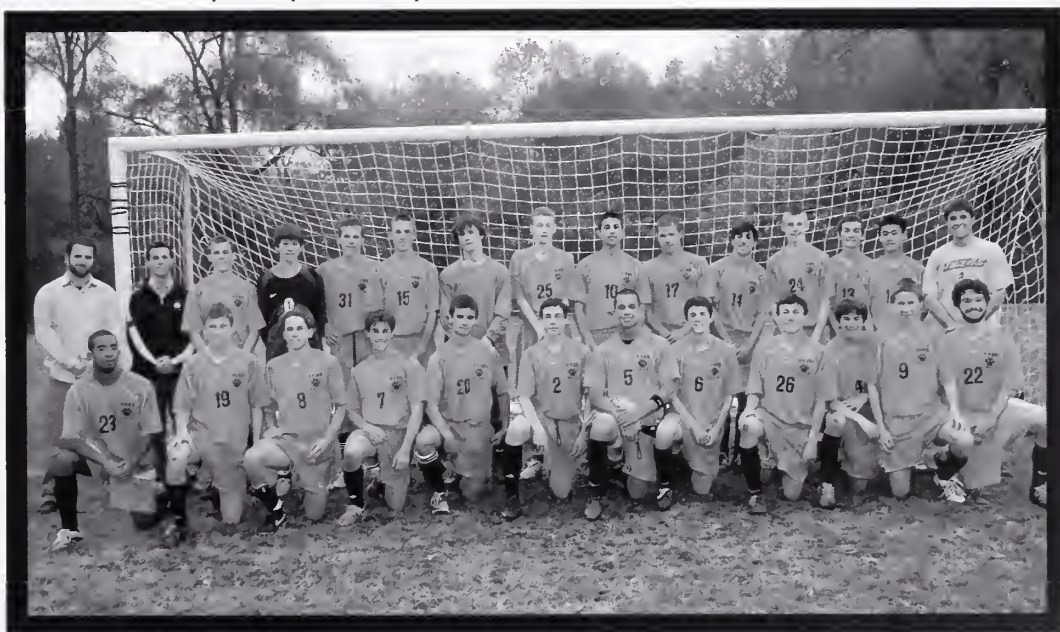

Although our record stood at 3-12-3, and although we found success difficult to come by, every player on our team expressed an attitude willing to work hard in the memory and wake of coach Ucal McKenzie. It was strenuous transition from last year to this year without our fiery leader on the sidelines. However, coach Brian Rooney stepped into his role honorably and like the players, worked as hard possible to try to make ends meet so we could be successful. We were successful in a non-traditional way. Wins and losses, although important, were not viewed as the most important aspect of our season. We planned to honor and remember Ucal McKenzie with our conduct off and on the field by working hard, by holding our heads high, and by being all we could be.

EPIC. That's the only way to describe cross-country this year. From that first day of pre-season celebrating our run with cookies and cupcakes, to food babies at team dinners, the team sleepover talent show, and of course some Turler trips, this team grew so close in the best way possible. This season was unique in that the whole team played a huge role in our success; everyone got a chance to excel. Point scorers were constantly changing, as runners of all ages got opportunities to shine. Though we started out the season a little shaky, we all trained hard, worked together and used our Tiger pride (and princess tiaras) to beat Brookline at our last home meet, and then go on to place 11th as a team at Class A's EMass. Girls, it's been a season to remember. Never forget your XC princess spirit. And above all else, always remember, wherever you go from here, whether you're that lion or gazelle, when the sun comes up... YOU'D BETTER BE RUNNING! (all day every day)

We started this season with big expectations. We lived up to them by going 10-0 for our first ten races. Then our season started going downhill. We had a few injuries and we lost to Brookline. Our post season, as the most disappointing part of the season, as the fourth ranked team in the state when the season began, we finished 12th in Eastern Massachusetts and did not move on as predicted. All in all it was a good experience and we had a bunch of fun.

To say that this has been an incredible season is an understatement. Including post season, we finished with a record of 18-2 which won us the Bay State Conference title. Additionally, we were the gold medal champions at the Hall of Fame Invitational Tournament and had five Bay State All Stars on the team. However, what we have achieved this season transcends numbers. Through a crazy trip to harvard square, eating our "energy pellets" during practice, and having daily dance parties in the gym, our team grew into a strong, supportive, wild family. We pushed each other on and off the court to be the best players and teammates we could possibly be. It was truly an unforgettable season. brussels sprouts/ Tat, rye bread /Nens, string cheese/ Em, small fry/ Ella and Allison we love you so much and thank you all for making our senior season the best it could possibly be.

The Newton North Girls' Swim and Dive team truly made a splash in the fall of 2009. It was the largest team in the seniors' four years of experience, and with its great size came great strength. New swimmers revealed incredible potential and motivation and old veterans returned with invaluable experience and dedication. The team showed the strongest record and had the most Sectionals and States qualifications of the four-year cycle. The Tigers knew they were the best when they creamed Brookline in the rival dual meet, and proved themselves to be S-U-P-E-R-G-R-E-A-T members of the community when they hosted a friendly meet and pizza party with students from the Perkins School for the Blind. Out of the pool, the girls developed a strong team bond. They came to school dressed in outrageous spirit, gave and received secret buddy gifts, enjoyed weekly team dinners at each others' houses, went apple picking, had a sleepover, and threw a karaoke dance party. This season was what? DYNAMITE!

Dear Girls,

Wow- where to begin? It has been an amazing season from start to finish. From the very beginning we have been a true team- sprinters, hurdlers, jumpers, throwers, and distance runners coming together to have an awesome time at each practice. Every single girl brought her best effort day after day, and our record shows it. First we were State Relays Champions- proof that we truly are one of the top teams in the state. Although we came in as underdogs, the competition didn't stand a chance when we decided that we were the best team out there. Then there was our meet against Weymouth a head to head battle like no other. We gave more than 100% across the board and reclaimed our title as League Champions. But the true highlight of our season was spending time together as a team, from our trip to the Relays to team dinners and bus sing-alongs. Thank you to each and every one of you for making Indoor 09-10 a truly memorable and wildly fun season!

Love, Jaya and Sam

This year we had an impressive indoor season. We were undefeated and Bay State League Champions, yet again. We also championed against Brookline. Our long days in the SOA and in the freezing cold paid off in the post season: we had a lot of State qualifiers, two All-State qualifiers, and one National qualifier.

Special thanks to Coach Blackburn and Coach Wallace. Good luck next year and remember: "Do work and #&%$ Brookline."

We'll start with the facts:

Unfortunately we didn't make tournament,
With a record of six, twelve and two,
But this season was one of the greatest,
We are just sad that it's through.

Our win against Milton
Was a highlight of the year
With everyone playing hard and together
How far we had come was clear

Our before school practices,
Were oh so much fun,
Sprinting over and over
Before we could see the sun.

Dance parties in the locker room
And team dinners that lasted forever
Were some of the moments
That made this season even better.

Girls, yes you freshmen too,
We can't thank you enough,
Even when we faced adversity,
You all stayed tough.

We'll miss you so much,
And can't wait to play you next year.
But until then,
Keep your hearts full and your eyes clear.

This year we came into our season with a big team and high expectations. We rose to every occasion and met our goals all season long. Every girl learned a new skill; we endured hard workouts, and made it through tough meets together, as a team. As a team, we broke our team record twice and broke team event records on both floor and bars. As a team, we came within 0.5 of winning Bay States and 0.05 from making Sectionals. Through the trials and tribulations of gymnastics: the injuries, fears, mental blocks, sore muscles, rivalries, tears and laughter, don't forget that we made it as a team. We could not have been as successful as we were this season without our coach Mr. Chin, who has encouraged, critiqued and spotted us all season, Evelyn Hurtwitz, who has been the best manager, even showing up sick to be there for us, and the boys team for supporting us everyday during practices and meets. Good luck next year and remember:

The season this year was one of the best that we could ask for. It's awesome to know that we can be part of a team where we have homies to back us up through anything. It seems like we tend to feed off each other and strive to do better. Even though we didn't win any meets, we are proud to say that we are one of the loudest and happiest teams. It's a shame that this couldn't last, but we will take away some very joyous memories.

It's pretty hard to argue with the results we posted this year. 17-6 record, 2nd in team Sectionals, 6 State qualifiers, and let's not forget the first ever New England Champ in NNHS history, Sam Shames. Accolades like these are not just handed out. We pushed ourselves hard every day at practice because we were never satisfied; we always wanted to better ourselves. The senior leadership this year was terrific, and we found some real talent in the underclassmen.

It's also pretty hard not to succeed when you have John Staulo, the legend himself, as your coach, along with Coach Garret, Grady and Schaeffer.

boys' tennis

With four varsity members returning this year, the boys tennis team looks like they are in pretty good shape. With one returning senior, two returning juniors, and one returning sophomore, the team looks like it will have some good leadership to help the new freshman. There seems to be some new talent on the freshman side. Even the kids that will play junior varsity this year foreshadow fantastic seasons in the upcoming years. But for now, the boys are trying to concentrate on this year. There will probably be very good depth among the new singles players, all of whom show a lot of promise for the season. The boys will try to get as many wins as possible, but their ultimate goal is to make the state tournament. However, this will not come easy. Other teams in the league are also looking very sharp, thus they must use every resource to win. However once again, the boys are relying on some leadership from returning players in order to guide them in the right direction.

This season has been a huge success. We have had one of the largest teams in the programs history this season with 83 girls. We are an extremely young team, but the underclassmen did a wonderful job embodying what it truly means to be a newton north tiger. The girls track program has carried on a long tradition of success and excellence and this outdoor team of 2010 has worked themselves right into the tradition. At the beginning of the season they were told that they were becoming part of a team that is accustomed to success. The team was not intimidated, and they certainly did not back down in the face of the challenge either. As a team, a huge team, we rose to the occasion and added to the tradition of success. The team has grown, matured and most importantly improved. The team goal every season is to have at least one hundred personal records (PRs) by the end of the season, and the girls met that goal with ease. The newton north outdoor track team of 2010 has done a great job, and has proudly become a part of the newton north track legacy of success and excellence.

boys' outdoor track

In Newton North Track, we have always had one tradition, one goal, and one passion: to win. For the past thirteen years, we've stuck close to what we believed in, and as a result, we have not yet lost a dual meet. In our outdoor season this year, we hope to continue applying this philosophy to everything we do as we confront a new set of opportunities and challenges. This year, as before, we'll have no home track to practice on, so once again, we have to make do with what we have, whether it be the YMCA, Newton South's track, or the city streets. At the same time, there are enough returning contributors and emerging stars to make this an exciting year as well, so everyone on the team will have plenty to look forward to. But regardless the circumstances, the co-captains Hao-Kai Wu, Conor Ebbs, Michael Goldenberg, and Jake Gleason are ready as ever to lead the team. Through sweat, blood, and sheer ambition, hopefully we will emerge from the dust at the end of the season with new titles on our mantles and an undefeated record intact.

Congratulations to the Class of 2010!

Good luck and remember the wise words of Uncle Terwilliger:

My Uncle Terwilliger on the Art of Eating Popovers

My uncle ordered popovers
from the restaurant's bill of fare.
And, when they were served,
he regarded them
with a penetrating stare...
Then he spoke great Words of Wisdom
as he sat there on that chair:
"To eat these things,"
said my uncle,
"you must exercise great care.
You may swallow down what's solid...
BUT... you must spit out the air!"

And...
as you partake of the world's bill of fare,
that's darned good advice to follow.
Do a lot of spitting out the hot air.
And be careful what you swallow.

Theodor Seuss Geisel, a.k.a. Dr. Seuss, original poem recited to the graduates of Lake Forest College in suburban Chicago in 1977

My son a strong, sensitive, kind, caring, considerate, entertaining, intelligent, persistent and determined man.....

YOU have been the JOY in my life!!!

You have shown strength and perseverance through good times and bad.

You have a passion for life and the desire to make a difference. Believe in yourself and always follow your dreams.

Trust your instincts and make the most of life's opportunities. Celebrate every day in your life for there is some accomplishments.

Remember how you treat others defines who you are.

Love the life you live and live the life you love.

I wish you continued success through life's journey.

A Message from the Editors

What a year it's been! Even though we spent multiple hours holed in the yearbook office, hunting down captains for blurbs, and calling prestige for different sports pictures -- we finally did it. In the end, not only did we create a book which holds the memories from the '010 era, but the past hundred years as well. Best of luck to the graduating class of 2010.

-- Aida Skelic and Rani Jacobson

Congratulations on making it through high school! The past year has been filled with frantically identifying photos, writing last minute captions, and making sure each article or picture is in place. Yet we've done it, and now we have a yearbook to show for it. I hope you all have a wonderful four years of college and the rest of your lives.

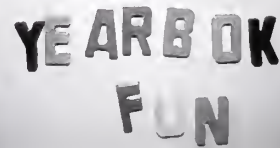

-- Emily Lemieux

Wow, what a year! It took a lot of late (and crazy) nights, frantic searching for names and shooting last minute photos of unsuspecting people we don't even know, but we finally did it; the yearbook is done! Thanks to Anna, Amanda and the staff for all their support and teaching me how to use photoshop and everything else in general. To the class, it's been great; hope you'll use this book to remember all the good times we had in '010 (all day, every day.)

Although we've missed a few deadlines and were always a little behind, we've managed to produce an awesome yearbook complete with tagged photos, captions and blurbs- things we all know we've had to nag and harass people for. Now, we can always remember the Newton North we attended and represented even when the building is gone. Congrats to the class of 2010 and thank you for a great year of memories! Best of luck!

At the end of last year, the future of this yearbook was uncertain. I thought the class of 2010 might not have a yearbook, since compiling a 240 page yearbook with one staff member and an adviser is quite impossible. However, thanks to our housemaster, Mr. Aronson, Ms. Verre, to the Newtonian adviser, Amanda (especially), and numerous other people, we got the staff we needed to make this book happen. And it did! It took lots of hard work, stress, and the cooperation of many people, but we are finally done, and I think it's one of the most rewarding projects I have ever been able to be a part of. That being said, I would like to thank every staff member for picking up the slack when needed, especially with student life, since several people stepped in when it wasn't their assigned job, and all the section editors for really making each section their own. To the staffers, thank you also for doing all the work that made it possible to finish the nitty gritty details. Lastly, a great thanks to Amanda, who truly made the book come together, who stayed late hours with us, and who spent every day with me after school, giving inspiration and help; you went above and beyond the call of duty. I am eternally grateful to everyone who helped create this book. And good luck to the Class of 2010, for whom was put in all this effort.

~~Brought Bringing Down~~ the House

Well, it is time to finally tear this school down; you could say brick by brick. But, truthfully, we built up this school community over the past four years and are the last class to graduate from here. We leave knowing that we made history at Newton North High School. We have crafted the halls and filled them with our legacy. What more is there to say? We did what we had to do: worked hard and gave this school its spirit. We have endowed it with a powerful pride that will withstand the new school for years to come. Yet now we must part from the place we've called home for the past four years. We leave it for new places, but it remains in our thoughts. Perhaps someday we'll return to visit the new North, but until then, so long.
